Making a Good Life
An Ethnography of Nature, Ethics, and Reproduction
Katharine Dow

“This beautifully written book challenges traditional accounts of nature, reproduction, and ethics, not only by demonstrating new relationships between them, but also by radically redefining these core concepts. Dow’s magnificent work sets a new course for the future of reproductive studies and the social study of ethics, kinship, and the environment.”
—Sarah Franklin, University of Cambridge

Making a Good Life takes a timely look at the ideas and values that inform how people think about reproduction and assisted reproductive technologies. In an era of heightened scrutiny about parenting and reproduction, fears about environmental degradation, and the rise of the biotechnology industry, Katharine Dow delves into the reproductive ethics of those who do not have a personal stake in assisted reproductive technologies, but who are building lives inspired and influenced by environmentalism and concerns about the natural world’s future.

How Men Age
What Evolution Reveals about Male Health and Mortality
Richard G. Bribiescas

“How Men Age is a wise, thoughtful, and provocative book that everyone should read—women and men alike. Bribiescas eloquently explains how and why men mature and die, drawing on evolutionary theory, endocrinology, anthropology, genetics, and more. His insights will change how you think about human life—including your own.”
—Daniel E. Lieberman, author of The Story of the Human Body: Evolution, Health, and Disease

While the health of aging men has been a focus of biomedical research for years, evolutionary biology has not been part of the conversation—until now. How Men Age is the first book to explore how natural selection has shaped male aging, how evolutionary theory can inform our understanding of male health and well-being, and how older men may have contributed to the evolution of some of the very traits that make us human.

This series presents innovative work that extends classic ethnographic methods and questions into areas of pressing interest in technology and economics. It explores the varied ways new technologies combine with older technologies and cultural understandings to shape novel forms of subjectivity, embodiment, knowledge, place, and community. By doing so, the series demonstrates the relevance of anthropological inquiry to emerging forms of digital culture in the broadest sense.

Digital Keywords
A Vocabulary of Information Society and Culture
Edited by Benjamin Peters

In the age of search, keywords increasingly organize research, teaching, and even thought itself. Inspired by Raymond Williams’s 1976 classic Keywords, the timely collection Digital Keywords gathers pointed, provocative short essays on more than two dozen keywords by leading and rising digital media scholars from the areas of anthropology, digital humanities, history, political science, philosophy, religious studies, rhetoric, science and technology studies, and sociology. Digital Keywords examines and critiques the rich lexicon animating the emerging field of digital studies.

This collection broadens our understanding of how we talk about the modern world, particularly of the vocabulary at work in information technologies. Contributors scrutinize each keyword independently: for example, the recent pairing of digital and analog is separated, while classic terms such as community, culture, event, memory, and democracy are treated in light of their historical and intellectual importance. Metaphors of the cloud in cloud computing and the mirror in data mirroring combine with recent and radical uses of terms such as information, sharing, gaming, algorithm, and internet to reveal previously hidden insights into contemporary life. Bookended by a critical introduction and a list of over two hundred other digital keywords, these essays provide concise, compelling arguments about our current mediated condition.

“Digital Keywords interrogates some of the words at the center of our socio-technical world, revealing the way in which the digital has reconfigured culture. This inspiring book is essential for all who are trying to understand our contemporary mediated society. It’s a pure delight for anyone who hasn’t stopped to think about the power of these words.”

Democracy’s Infrastructure
Techno-Politics and Protest after Apartheid
Antina von Schnitzler

“Democracy’s Infrastructure takes an incisive, illuminating look at the technopolitics of water in South Africa. Through close and careful observation, this book reveals how specific technological mechanisms enable and constrain government projects, and how forms of measurement and pricing shape new, market-oriented subjects. This is a major contribution, one that joins the study of social movements and political resistance to the new anthropology of infrastructure in an entirely convincing way.”

—James Ferguson, author of Give a Man a Fish: Reflections on the New Politics of Distribution

Democracy’s Infrastructure examines how seemingly mundane technological domains become charged territory for struggles over South Africa’s political transformation.

Creativity Class
Art School and Culture Work in Postsocialist China
Lily Chumley

“Chumley’s compelling and iconoclastic approach effortlessly weaves together ethnographic insight, art criticism, and semiotic analysis to produce a book unlike any I’ve ever read. Equally attentive to art practice, the textures of selfhood, educational bureaucracies, and social change, Creativity Class not only offers a thoroughly original portrait of life in contemporary China, but also sets a new standard for how to study aesthetics and creativity in the social world.”
—Keith M. Murphy, University of California, Irvine

Since German reunification in 1990, there has been widespread concern about marginalized young people who, faced with bleak prospects for their future, have embraced increasingly violent forms of racist nationalism that glorify the country’s Nazi past. The Management of Hate, Nitzan Shoshan’s riveting account of the year and a half he spent with these young right-wing extremists in East Berlin, reveals how they contest contemporary notions of national identity and defy the clichés that others use to represent them.

For Love of the Prophet
An Ethnography of Sudan’s Islamic State
Noah Salomon

“Challenging received wisdom about Muslim politics, Islam and the public sphere, as well as Islamism’s relationship with Sufism and Salafism, Noah Salomon succeeds brilliantly in uncovering the ways in which Islamist policies have changed and shaped the religious landscape of Sudan. This innovative, inspiring, and important book will have a strong impact in the fields of Islamic studies, Sudan studies, and the anthropology of religion.”
—Rüdiger Seesemann, University of Bayreuth

Through careful ethnographic analysis, Noah Salomon shows how state interventions into three key domains of modern life—politics, aesthetics, and epistemology—rapidly became sites of debate and controversy within diverse Muslim publics. Salomon investigates Sudan at a crucial moment in its history—balanced between unity and partition, secular and religious politics, peace and war—when Islamic actors were questioning the variety of Islam under which they had lived for nearly a generation.

On British Islam
Religion, Law, and Everyday Practice in Shari’a Councils
John R. Bowen

“In On British Islam, John Bowen’s careful work, informed by anthropological insight and a comparative perspective, puts paid to oversimple stories of a clash of civilizations. Bowen shows how attempts by British Muslims to reach convergence with the wider society have varied, and often successful, results, and how these have been influenced by cultural characteristics unique to Britain versus other European nations. This is essential reading for anyone interested in issues of social integration.”

Righteous Transgressions
Women’s Activism on the Israeli and Palestinian Religious Right
Lihi Ben Shitrit

“This excellent and rigorously researched book enhances our understanding of Jewish and Muslim religious-political movements and women’s attendant roles in ways that have remained largely unaddressed until now.”

—Sara Roy, Harvard University

How do women in conservative religious movements expand spaces for political activism in ways that go beyond their movements’ strict ideas about male and female roles? How and why does this activism happen in some movements but not in others? Righteous Transgressions examines these questions by comparatively studying four groups: the Jewish settlers in the West Bank, the ultra-Orthodox Shas, the Islamic Movement in Israel, and the Palestinian Hamas. Lihi Ben Shitrit demonstrates that women’s prioritization of a nationalist agenda over a proselytizing one shapes their activist involvement.

“A remarkable feat of interdisciplinary scholarship, this innovative book examines the persistence of the caliphate as a cultural symbol.”
—S. Sayyid, author of Recalling the Caliphate

In the United States and Europe, the word “caliphate” has conjured historically romantic and increasingly pernicious associations. Yet the caliphate’s significance in Islamic history and Muslim culture remains poorly understood. This book explores the myriad meanings of the caliphate for Muslims around the world through the analytical lens of two key moments of loss in the thirteenth and twentieth centuries.

A History of the ‘Alawis
From Medieval Aleppo to the Turkish Republic

“A History of the ‘Alawis is a path-breaking work that attacks the prevailing lachrymose version of ‘Alawi history and its focus on the community’s perpetual isolation and repression. Stefan Winter debunks numerous myths in the first sweeping study of the ‘Alawis to use the Ottoman archives systematically. Anyone who wants to understand Syria’s tragic civil war must read this exciting and magisterial survey.”

—Joshua Landis, University of Oklahoma

The ‘Alawis, or Alawites, are a prominent religious minority in northern Syria, Lebanon, and southern Turkey, best known today for enjoying disproportionate political power in war-torn Syria. In this book, Stefan Winter offers a complete history of the community.

Defining Neighbors
Religion, Race, and the Early Zionist-Arab Encounter
Jonathan Marc Gribetz

“This book is a truly extraordinary scholarly accomplishment. From this point forward, anybody who wants to understand the origins of the Arab-Israeli conflict will not be able to do so without consulting Gribetz’s work.”

—Israel Gershoni, coeditor of Rethinking Nationalism in the Arab Middle East

As the Israeli-Palestinian conflict persists, aspiring peacemakers continue to search for the precise territorial dividing line that will satisfy both Israeli and Palestinian nationalist demands. The prevailing view assumes that this struggle is nothing more than a dispute over real estate. Defining Neighbors boldly challenges this view, shedding new light on how Zionists and Arabs understood each other in the earliest years of Zionist settlement in Palestine and suggesting that the current singular focus on boundaries misses key elements of the conflict.
